

January 27-28, 1943

One of the worst, if not the worst glaze storms in Richmond's history occurred. The total thickness of ice accumulation was nearly an inch.

Telephone, telegraph, and power lines suffered great damage, and service to some sections of the Richmond area was not restored for two weeks or more. There was some damage to buildings and many thousands of trees were destroyed or badly broken.